

LIMINA

A JOURNAL OF HISTORICAL & CULTURAL STUDIES

CALL FOR PAPERS - 2024 Special Issue

Deadline: 29 February 2024

Following our 2023 conference, Limina: A Journal of Historical and Cultural Studies is inviting articles for its forthcoming special issue on the conference theme 'Crisis', scheduled for publication in late 2024. We welcome scholarly contributions of 5000-7000 words written for a non-specialist audience.

Topics may include, but are not limited to:

- Social, political, historical, economic, ecological, psychological, or identity crises
- Theorising crisis
- Media depictions of crises
- Apocalyptic and post-apocalyptic studies
- War and conflict studies
- Extremism studies
- Disability studies
- The intersection of overlapping crises and their impact
- The 'polycrisis' or 'everything crisis'

Limina encourages HDR students and early career researchers (ECRs) to submit papers.

Please submit your article as an email attachment in MS Word format or Rich Text Format (RTF) to liminajournal@gmail.com by 29 February 2024.

In a separate document, please also provide:

- Your name
- Your email address
- Your institutional affiliation
- The title of the article
- A 150-word abstract
- List a minimum of 6 - 8 keywords for your article
- A statement certifying that this article is not under consideration elsewhere
